

Scott Naumann of Midland Communications Named Volunteer of the Year by DavenportOne

Successful Businessman Gives Back to Community Year After Year

DAVENPORT, IA — September 3, 2009 — Midland Communications, an industry leader in unified communications, announced today that Scott Naumann, the company's outstanding sales executive, was named Volunteer of the Year by DavenportOne, a local business organization with over 1,200 member businesses from single proprietors to large industries. Over 325 Quad-City business professionals and elected officials attended the DavenportOne Annual Meeting & Volunteer Recognition at the Rogalski Center on the St. Ambrose University campus on Wednesday, Aug. 12. The audience gathered to celebrate the organization's successes and accomplishments of the past year and recognize the efforts of fellow volunteers like Mr. Naumann.

During a special presentation Mr. Naumann was honored as the 2009 Larry Read Volunteer of the Year. The annual award is given to a select individual who has made extraordinary efforts on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Naumann devoted substantial time and energy making a powerful impact on the organization. Throughout the year he attended more than 50 DavenportOne programs, events, and committee meetings. He also personally secured over 40 new members and served on a variety of committees. "Whether it's recruiting new members, soliciting current members for feedback, brokering information, or forging relationships, this year's volunteer of the year is a grassroots advocate who gets in the trenches to assist in meeting the needs of our members and our business community," said Rene Hipple, Vice President, Member and Resource Development.

"Scott is a true superstar and we're extremely proud of him," said Jason Smith, Sales Manager of Midland Communications. "He is the type of individual that gives more than he takes in life, is dedicated to serving the Quad-Cities business community, and is passionate in helping everyone succeed. We are truly fortunate to have somebody like Scott be an integral part of the Midland Communications team. He represents all of the values that we stand for as an organization. "
